Dashed Into an Apartment House, Creating a Panic Among Tenants.

POLIGEMAN SWEENEY A HERD.

Found the Brute in Mrs. Ochman's Parlor and Clubbed His Brains Out.

TRIED TO LEAP FROM A WINDOW.

But Became Entangled in Lace Curtains. Which Held Him Until His Slayer Came.

A mad dog ran amuck in Park avenu house in East One Hundred and Nineteenth street, created a panic among the battared out by a policeman. Just as Mrs. Kate Moher, the houseof the five-story flat-house 78 One Hundred and Nineteenth street, was lighting the gas in the hall on the third floor, a white dog, frothing at the mouth and yelping as though were after him, rushed up the stairs three steps at a time.

Moher ran into the apartments of Mrs. H. Reinert to get a broom dog snapped at her as she slammed the door and continued his wild flight

Mrs. Julius Wagner and Mrs. J. H. Gugan, who live on the floor above, heard the yelping of the beast and discreetly kept their doors closed. Mrs. Ochman, who lives on the top floor, had just reached there, with a stepladder in her hand, when she saw the dog coming. She set down the ladder and quickly ran up to her apartscreaming from fear. kitchen door was open and the dog rat into that apartment.

The animal ran through the flat four times. Mrs. Ochman finally plucked up enough courage to slam the kitchen door shut when she knew that the dog was in the front room. The animal finally sprang for the open window in finally sprang for the open window in the parlor, which fronts on Park avenue, and, but for a doral pot which stood on the sill, would have landed on the Matchmarker Fleming has no authority to decide such an important matter.

Instead of that the flower pot was pushed down into the street, the dog fel ick and got tangled up in Mrs. Och man's lace curtains.

Policeman Sweeney, of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station, was coming along at the time, and was told by about fifty people at once that a mad dog was in No. 78. Sweeney found the animal hopelessly enmeshed in the lace curtains. He used his club industriously, and the dog, becoming disentangled, leaped landed on the stil a blow from Sweeney's club put an end to its career.

As the policeman carried the body of the dog from the house, the tenants breathed freely, and showered blessings on the brave, good-looking "copper," as they called him.

This action was taken yesterday aftermon by the manager's of Lavigne and Criffo and the club officials. The new date selected is May 30, Decoration Day. "Young" Griffs has been neglecting his work for the sowing bowl at Coney Island, and was in no shape to fulfil his contract next Imesda night. Rather than have a one-sided contest, and to protect the club's patrons, the change was made. Manager Behan will take "Young" Griffo to Abury Park, where he will train with Choynski and Ityen at Davies's cotage. This will in no way interfere with the Smith-Ityan contest on May 27.
